The annual meeting of the Southern Wisconsin Teachers' association will be held at Madison February 12 and 13. Already a large number of Rock county educators, both in city and rural schools, are making plans to attend.

The law allows school board members, both rural and city, to permit instructors to attend such sessions without loss of pay. Teachers contemplating attending the Madison meeting are urged to inform their school boards.

TODAY'S PHENOMENON

HAS SUPERSTITIOUS ASPECT TO MANY?

SHADOW ON THE FACE OF THE SUN CAUSES CONSTERNATION.

NOT A TOTAL ECLIPSE

Blood on Peace as Thought Uppermost in Minds of Many Who Are True Believers in the Black Cat and Friday Troubles.

Did you watch the partial eclipse of the sun this morning? If not, you will fail to appreciate the significance that it has impressed upon the minds of the superstitious throughout the world. While but partial here, it was total in some parts of the globe where it was closely observed.

Thousands of generations who shudder when a black cat runs in front of them or who have premonitions of evil on Friday, the thirteenth, see in this phenomenon an omen either of good or evil in the European war.

This belief is accentuated by the fact that the path of totality of the eclipse extends from the middle of the Pacific ocean over the Atlantic, across the extreme northeast portion of South America and taking a northeastern direction and ending south of Ireland in the British Isles.

A number of governments sent out expeditions to South America to study the phenomenon. When a total eclipse of the sun takes place every few years, astronomers study the nature of old.

As the eclipse ends right on the edge of the war zone, the omen is taken as a good one for peace some time during 1916.

Before astronomers succeeded in working out solar basis and lunar eclipses on a mathematical basis, so that they could be predicted years in advance, they were generally looked upon all over the world as being supernatural visitation which portended great evil or great good. The Chinese, for instance, believed that a dragon had come to "eat up" the sun.

The only way the dragon could be frightened away, they thought, was to propitiate their gods, and this was done by beating drums and making as much noise as possible. The sun was kept up until the shadow, which happened to be obscuring either the face of the moon or the sun, passed away. Then all hands were satisfied that they had saved themselves and their country from a great disaster, and they ceased worrying until another eclipse came along.

Might Mean Peace.

But even in these times, with every detail of an eclipse worked out in advance, there still are many who believe a supernatural visitation has come great meaning behind it. As the eclipse of today began in waters adjacent to the Americas and swept over the southern continent toward the war zone, it might be considered as meaning that peace in Europe will be brought about through North and South America.

Whether it may mean, a study of the phenomenon is interesting. In the first place, it must be remembered that the earth is revolving from west to east. Sunrise will find the moon west in such position that its shadow was projected on the waters on the Pacific.

Then, although the sun seems to be traveling east to west, the direct shadow of the moon which is revolving with the earth, will sweep in a northeasterly direction. It crossed the northern portion of Columbia, South America, and then crossed the Atlantic over the island of Gaudoupe, and finally will be near Ireland. This shadow was projected miles in diameter. Within that border the eclipse will be total.

Partial in East.

In New York and the eastern states the eclipse was partial, that, about two-thirds of the sun was obscured. It began in this city at 9:05 a. m. and ended at 12:34. In Denver it first was seen at 7:41 a. m. and in Chicago it began before 11 o'clock.

If you are superstitious, believe in "hunches" you can figure it out any way your imagination may suggest. There are some famous eclipses of history, and the event which occurred along with them, which may help out a bit in preparing a "hunch chart" on the European war:

May 28, 1123 B. C.—In the reign of the fourth emperor of the Hsia dynasty of China, first known eclipse recorded in history. It is memorable because the two royal astronomers, who were employed to predict eclipses, and thus have the way for rites to prevent the dragon from eating up the sun, got drunk and failed to make the prediction. To appease the gods they were put to death.

Nov. 28, 771 B. C.—Annual eclipse of the sun. This is believed to have been the date of the birth of Romulus, one of the founders of Rome.

May 28, 716 B. C.—Total eclipse of the sun; Romulus died.

May 28, 528 B. C.—Eclipse of the sun, which was predicted by Thales of Miletus, the father of Greek astronomy. On this day a battle was fought on between Lydians and the Medes, which ended in a Persian victory. When the combatants observed the eclipse they laid down their arms and concluded a treaty of peace.

May 19, 337 B. C.—Median city of Larissa captured by the Persians. The Medes, entrenched in the city, were fighting the Persians when, according to Xenophon, "a cloud covered the sun and caused it to disappear entirely." Alarmed by this eclipse, the Medes abandoned the city to the Persians.

580 B. C.—Cleombrotus, brother of Leonidas, the hero of Thermopylae, was making preparations to march his troops out against the Persians when he consulted the oracles. While he was offering sacrifices an eclipse of the sun occurred. This so frightened Cleombrotus that he drew off his troops and returned home.

431 B. C.—Eclipse of the sun occurred which nearly prevented the Athenian expedition against the Lacedaemonians. The sailors were frightened by the darkness, which they considered an evil omen and refused to sail. Pericles took his cloak, covered his eyes with it and said, "When he considered it, and asked his men, 'What is the difference, that, between this and the other, except that something bigger than any cloak causes the eclipse?' This reassured the sailors, who consented to depart."

Meant Death to Foe.

Aug. 4, 334 B. C.—Total eclipse of the sun, visible in the Mediterranean during a naval engagement in which the Persians were defeated by Conon.

To Fortify the System Against Grip, When Grip prevalent, LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE should be taken, as this combination of Quinine with other ingredients, destroys germs, acts as a tonic and laxative and thus keeps the Grip and Influenza at bay. There is only one "BROMO QUININE" signature on box. 25c.

who told his troops the obscuration of the sun meant death to the enemy.

310 B. C.—Agathocles, Tyrant of Syracuse, was conducting his fleet from Syracuse to the coast of Sicily, when an eclipse of the sun took place. His soldiers became greatly frightened, fearing it was a bad omen, but Agathocles convinced them it was a good one and thus was able to retake on his enemies by landing on the coast of Africa at a point near Cape Bon and devastating the Carthaginian territories.

March 1, 51 B. C.—Eclipse of the sun occurred when Caesar crossed the Rubicon.

44 B. C.—Annual eclipse of the sun when Julius Caesar died. This is reported by Arago, but disputed by modern astronomers.

410 A. D.—Total eclipse of the sun when Alaric, king of the Visigoths, appeared before Rome.

453 A. D.—Gregorius Turonensis recorded an eclipse of the sun when Attila and the Huns were ravaging Italy, and said: "Then even the sun appeared hideous, so that of a sudden a third part of it gave light. I believe on account of such deeds of wickedness and shedding of blood."

The King Died.

733 A. D.—The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle says: "In this year the sun was eclipsed on the fifth of the nones of May, and Barcenbyht, king of the Kentish people, died."

733 A. D.—The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle says: "In this year Aethelbald, captured Somerton, and the sun was eclipsed, and all the sun's disc was like a black shield and Acca was driven from his bishopric."

May 5 A. D. 540—An eclipse of the sun occurred which so greatly frightened the people of the East (Charlemagne's son) that it contributed to his death.

Aug. 30, 1030—Eclipse of the sun while a battle was being fought in Norway, during which Olav, the king of Norway, was killed.

1153—Statement by historians that "something singular happened to the sun the day after the conversion of St. Paul is taken as referring to an eclipse."

1364—Dr. Lingard, the historian, recorded an eclipse of the sun, while the battle of Cressy was being fought; but this is disputed by modern astronomers.

Sept. 7, 1820—Eclipse of the sun in England while the trial of Queen Caroline was going on in the house of commons. The house suspended its sittings till the eclipse was over.

The basketball teams of the high school have put in a hard week of practice in preparation for the games with the Madison high school teams, which will be played here Friday night. The first game will be between the junior high teams, which will be followed by the big game between the first teams. The winner of this game will be considered the strongest team in this section of the state. Both teams have defeated practically every strong contender. Janesville has been considered a contender, but has been eliminated by a defeat in the hands of Edgerton, Waubesa, Madison and Beloit. Beloit cannot be considered strong this year inasmuch as they only were able to beat Janesville by one point on the Beloit team as Edgerton beat them 25 to 15 at Edgerton, and Madison beat them 16 to 10 at Janesville.

Edgerton and Janesville were yesterday brought home from the Madison tournament, where he has been under treatment for some time. He was met at the depot and taken to the home of Mrs. Wm. B. Brown on a cot.

INCREASED GASOLINE COST CRIMP IN AUTO BUSINESS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Cleveland, O., Feb. 2.—Because of the high price of gasoline here—20 to 25 cents per gallon, retail—many owners of automobiles are storing their cars. Some have not taken out their 1916 licenses, dealers and garage men say.

Tires and tubings have also cost more. The increased cost of gasoline is explained by dealers here as due to the fact that but one sixteenth more crude oil was produced in 1915 than in 1914, while 27 per cent more internal motive power was in operation.

However, government reports show that there is more crude oil above ground than ever before.

JAPAN IS CASTING HER EYES ON ASIA TO INCREASE POWER

Orient Is Troubled Over What Japan Is Going to Do Toward the Chinese in the Future.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Tokio, Feb. 3.—Just what Japan's intentions are with reference to China is a question that everybody is discussing in the Orient. Although official utterances adhere closely to the declaration that Japan seeks the peace of Asia and the maintenance of the integrity of China, and the maintenance of the open door for the people of all nations, men in various walks of life appear to believe that the future of Japan lies in China, but as to how that future is to be attained and what direction it will follow only the vaguest ideas exist.

Japan, with its 60,000,000 population and with a yearly increase of about 1,000,000, is conceived as feeling the absolute necessity of expansion somewhere. Her people do not fancy the cold climate of Hokkaido or districts like Sakhalin island, the half of which was acquired from Russia. They are filled with a business-like determination to emigrate to those places where opportunities are many and where they will get the most money for their services as well as the most material comforts for their money. Japan hemmed in by the waters of the Pacific in her island territory is described as looking with friendly eyes upon the great expanse of countries like the United States with their vast natural resources and as wondering why she, great nation as she is, should not have something to offer to the world. The material possibilities of the Chinese empire with its almost limitless areas are supposed constantly to whet the appetite of the people of Nippon.

The one thing that can be deduced from talking with the Japanese is that they believe their position in the Far East and their power entitle them to increase their influence in China until they fill the overwhelming role among the foreign powers. If anyone is to fill the predominating role, it should be Japan, they think. And they think that Japan should fill it in the interest of China and the interest of Japan. That may be said to be the fundamental doctrine underlying this year's negotiations with China.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Several writers have come forward insisting that Japan must at once take full advantage of the economic opportunities she has obtained in China, pointing out that the mere acquisition of these rights is not sufficient unless followed by business-like development. Dr. S. Suyehiro, a professor of Kyoto university, declares this is one means of dissipating anti-Japanese sentiments in China. He holds that the aversion of the Chinese people would disappear when they realized the satisfactory effects of Japan's exploitation of their resources on the general condition of the country. Instead of criticizing the government, Dr. Suyehiro says the people should study the chances of gain in Manchuria and Mongolia, where Japan has established a sphere of influence. He urges the Japanese to become active in every field of endeavor in these regions. Now that Japanese interests are increased there should be a big emigration there. The doctor is rather pessimistic as to the development as he thinks that the Japanese laborer is no match for the Chinaman in Manchuria. The same is true as to the shopkeepers, the Chinese being able to undersell the Japanese. So the writer concludes that the field for the Japanese is in industry and agriculture. As to industry, with an abundance of cheap and superior coal from Fushun, the prospects are excellent. As regards agriculture, rice cultivation appears hopeful. Dr. Suyehiro doubts, however, whether the Japanese farmers can obtain the same success in Manchuria as they have in California, which he has visited. He urges his fellow countrymen to understand that it is only by long and patient and untiring efforts that they can hope to find real benefits in Manchuria.

Other prominent men, especially those engaged in business, dwell upon the necessity of pushing Japan's opportunities in China. They voice their faith in the sincerity of the government in enunciating the principles of the open door and integrity. "It must be quite evident," wrote Mr. Yamada, a member of the house of representatives, "that in pressing her demands concerning Manchuria and Mongolia, Japan was completely free from the ambition of seeking to annex these regions. Japan is convinced that in order to establish closer relations between the two Oriental powers, to extricate China from impending danger and thus to ensure the maintenance of peace in the Far East she ought to secure a firmer foothold in China. The Chinese are really sincere in their oft-expressed desire for closer economic union with this empire they should see the reason underlying our demands."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Interests Mutual.
 "The interests of Japan and China are identical," wrote another business man. "We have no desire to crush China. On the contrary, we want her to develop."

Declaring that the treaty signed early in the year is unsatisfactory to extricate China from impending danger, casting their heads down. Some influential Japanese statesmen should go to Peking to secure the good will of the Chinese, and build up an estimate based on helpfulness and friendship.

Baron Ishii, the new minister of foreign affairs, is represented as favoring a policy of conciliation with China. This kind of policy is backed by the business interests who are seeking to extend the Japanese market in a general way develop the material interests of the empire. Another group, representing the political interests, are said to favor a more aggressive policy towards the Oriental neighbor.

Baron Ishii, who was subjected to an almost endless series of questions about China at a recent meeting of the budget committee of the Diet, said that the government would have no hesitation in giving official recognition to the proposed empire when it is considered certain that no disturbances will occur.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The impression exists here that Japan does not wish to alienate the sympathy of her ally, Great Britain, and the other great powers, including the United States, by action against China which might be interpreted as unduly aggressive and arouse hostile public opinion abroad. The attitude of Great Britain which is interpreted by some Japanese as acting as a brake on Japan, is beginning to arouse considerable criticism of England.

AMERICAN COTTON WILL FIND BIG MARKET IN SOUTH AMERICAN NATIONS

[SPECIAL TO THIS GAZETTE.]

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 2.—Brazilians now paying big prices for their cotton goods believe there is a cotton combine here which is taking advantage of the short northern Brazil crop to boost prices. The people believe a lower tariff would permit American cotton to come in and bring prices down. Legislation is now ready for passage looking toward this lower tariff and United States cotton growers may find a big market here to take the place of European markets they have lost. Brazil wears cotton. Not only wears it, but grows it. There are more than three hundred Brazilian mills manufacturing it. The mills employ 75,000 operators. Therefore, when a two years' drought in the north states reduces the crop by half, and a combine of buyers, protected by a 4 cents a pound import duty, corners this half and makes the textile industry pay an exorbitant price for it, the Brazilian sits up and takes notice. Because—the grower sold at the usual price, the miller paid a 20 per cent increase on it, the 75,000 operators are working half time and the other Brazilians are paying more for their clothes and other cotton goods. The only happy men in Brazil, so far as cotton is concerned, are the members of the buyers combine and they are sitting tight behind their 4 cent wall and saying nothing except that it is still terribly dry in the northern cotton fields. Last week President Braz directed a memorial to the governments of all the cotton states of Brazil, urging them to raise the export duties on cotton to a prohibitive figure. This is the extent of his power over export duties, which are regulated by the states individually. Recently a government measure was introduced in the federal senate proposing to delete, or at least reduce, the duty on imported raw cotton. The memorial to the states was directed in the hope of stopping a possible sabotage in the Brazilian markets. The bill in the senate has for its purpose the reduction in local prices by means of outside competition. Nobody can predict what the cotton states will do toward prohibiting the exportation of cotton, but it is safe to predict that the import duty will be reduced materially and that is the big hope of the textile industry. The hope of the American exporter and the benefit of all concerned except perhaps the Brazilian grower and the combine. The grower doesn't worry, except for oratorical purposes, because he produces the best cotton in the world when the drought permits him.

Amsterdam, Netherlands, Feb. 2.—

Not the least curious of the many strange incidental effects produced by the war is the fact that the small country of the Netherlands probably contains more gold today than it has in its history. In the past year, for instance, a continual steady inflow of gold from the European Continent and overseas has doubled the stocks of the Netherlands Bank, and with Holland's foreign exchanges continuing their over-ward course, there is no saying to what figure they will reach if the war lasts much longer and is still kept out of her borders.

With long queues standing daily at the bank's doors, the government at the outbreak of war had to reduce the compulsory gold covering the bank's liabilities from 10 to 20 per cent; those liabilities of 620,000,000 florins or $258,233,000 are now covered to the extent of 69 per cent, the gold stocks amounting to 430,000,000 florins or $179,465,000. On the other hand, a review of the year just closed shows that the banknote circulation has been a record one, reaching the figure of 578,700,000 florins on November 1st, or $240,291,000.

Other evidence of the favorable factors which the war has brought with it for Holland is found in the new year's speech of the Chairman of the Amsterdam Chamber of Commerce, in which he shows a number of business and industries have been able to make considerably increased profits, although the risks were abnormal. The Dutch shipping companies have been making enormous profits, while the Dutch cable companies are so crowded with work that orders can only be placed for very distant deliveries.

It may be noted incidentally that the considerable rise in the prices of American industrial securities was one of the principal factors that aided in a rapid liquidation of the mass of stock loan transactions that had been compulsorily suspended when the war crisis broke out, as the Dutch public took advantage of this rise to realize a large quantity of their American holdings and obtain the ready money they needed.

However, another side to the medal, the feverish activity in some economic departments is more than offset for the nation as a small angle with it. Now it, some-about the earth, the moon is right in between the sun and the earth in such a way as to obstruct the light of the sun on its way to the earth, exactly as someone might walk between you and the lighted lamp in your sitting room.

 The lamp is then in "solar" eclipse.
 Inasmuch as the moon must always be directly between the sun and earth, a line of solar eclipse, the phase of the moon which is due to this position is that of new-moon.

No every new moon will bring us some kind of solar eclipse, however, because in order that the moon may obstruct our vision of the sun, it is necessary for him to be directly or very nearly on the exact straight line joining the sun and earth. If he be too much above it or below it, we will have the usual occurrence of a new moon without the eclipse. Again, the moon's orbital plane were the same as the ecliptic, or earth's plane, an eclipse would occur at every new moon; for then the moon would always be in the same place with the sun and earth and could not help getting directly in between the sun and earth as it turned about the earth.
 We have seen above that the moon's orbital plane makes an angle with that of the earth, and so it will be only when we have a new moon at the time that the moon in its orbit is in a place very near the earth's ectic that we shall have an eclipse. Of course, at the intersection of these two planes the new moon will be in both planes at once; so we would have eclipses then, and also if the new moon occurs at places very near this intersection point.

Not every eclipse will be a full and total darkening of the sun's disk; the moon may pass in such a way as to cover up only part of the disk. Again, it may happen that the moon is so far from the earth that when he passes the sun he covers up only the central portion, and we see around the black moon a bright ring of the sun's disk. This is called an annular eclipse. There will be one of these on July 29 of this year, visible only in the regions about Australia.

It is a very interesting fact that, if a certain eclipse happens on a given date, in exactly 6,585 days we shall have an absolutely similar eclipse occurring. This period is called the Saros, was discovered long ago by the ancient Chaldean astronomers. It is the lowest common multiple of several of the lunar periods, so that after this number of days, conditions are bound to repeat themselves.

What does the fortunate one who finds himself in a location of visibility of a total eclipse, really see? As the moon slowly creeps over the face of the brilliant sun no apparent difference is at first noticed in the general illumination. Only as it approaches the crescent shape we notice that images of the sun form on the ground by the small spaces between leaves on a tree are of a crescent shape. But as the moon slowly engulfs more and more of the sun's disk, the darkness mysteriously and unceasingly increases rapidly, till only a small, thin strip of the sun is left.
 Then suddenly the gloom reaches its maximum, and the sun is entirely cut off. The moon slowly creeps over the bursts upon our view the boundless beauty of the silvery corona and the protuberances flaming rose-red in great streamers about the blue-black shadow of the moon. These last four minutes this lasts, and then suddenly a shaft of sunlight strikes the earth and melts away the glorious color display, not to be seen again until the next eclipse.

whole by the big rise in the cost of living and the burden of the mobilization costs. The war loan of some $115,000,000 has long since been eaten up, and at the end of the year the floating debt of the treasury had again grown to $54,000,000, so that another big loan seems inevitable in the coming spring, while large taxation increases are already before Parliament.

The export of cut and rough diamonds to the United States amounted in the first three quarters of the year to 13,780,000 florins or $5,745,800, against 12,781,000 florins or $5,325,400.
 The demand for rough diamonds, which was small in the beginning of the year, increased considerably, especially in the third quarter of the year, while prices remained firm. Amsterdam merchants have been establishing more representation in America than formerly, so that the increased stocks in their possession should be taken into account in connection with the foregoing figures.

TIME FOR ACTION.

This is the time for action on the part of the farmers of Rock county to see that they obtain good, sound seed corn for the coming planting. It is not out of place to call the attention of every agriculturist to this fact that the failure of the 1915 crop means a second failure if care is not taken to obtain seed that will germinate. The United States government, the state agricultural college, every writer on matters pertaining to farm life, call attention to this fact. At all meetings of the various societies in the rural districts this subject is a topic for discussion and every farmer who is wide awake should recognize its importance.

At Rock county boys can grow crops that average over a hundred bushels to the acre and are commended upon the country over their fathers and their brothers and their uncles can do likewise. The Gazette is most anxious to promote the corn growing of Rock county. It is a staple crop that will always command a price that is well worth the labor put into it. While not a new crop to the Badger soil, still its development is in its infancy.

Time was when the prairie lands around Janesville were dotted with fields of wheat. The wheat area has gone farther west and the more lucrative crops have been developed in Wisconsin. A writer in a Chicago paper in 1888 described the miles of wheat fields as viewed from Mount Zion. Today this view from Mount Zion, with a diverse number of crops in which corn and tobacco and until recently, sugar beets, were the foreground.

To obtain good corn results good seed must be secured. Every farmer planting his acreage for this crop should be certain that the seed he is using is the best obtainable by scientific tests. The Gazette in a few days will publish an interesting article on this subject which will be well worth reading and considering. It will be illustrated with cuts to show the different steps and it is hoped will be of value to all.

REAL EFFICIENCY.

Right now, when politics are in the air, it is a good time to take notice of a few things which we expect will help bring about greater economy and better management in our state business.

The governor of the state has no direct control over departmental commissions, etc., except where he has a number of offices, of the body concerned. He has no direct control over finances, except that he may veto or sign the appropriation bills. These powers may not veto in part, but must either accept or reject them as they come to him. He has no part in framing these bills except through the exercise of his influence. No legal machinery for getting information has heretofore been supplied.

This lack of control has made impossible efficient administration of state funds. The 1915 legislature took a step forward when it passed the amendment to the law creating the Board of Public Affairs so as to provide within the board a more efficient state budget procedure. The board is given power to get information, through conferences, hearings, or investigations. Estimates as to needs are sent to the board by the various institutions, departments, boards and commissions. These the board must study and analyze. It must get information as to past performance. It must decide whether the funds requested are or are not excessive.

The budget report, as made to the legislature before the session must contain comparisons of requests with expenditures for the five preceding years. Every recommendation must carry with it reasons, and unless the board is unanimous in its decision the roll must be printed.

The governor, chairman of the board. The governor-elect, whenever a governor is not re-elected, will be invited to attend meetings, and to approve or disapprove of recommendations. His position will also be printed in the report. Thus, in so far as the governor, or governor-elect, approves of the recommendations, and if these recommendations are accepted by the legislature, just so far can he be held directly responsible.

The effectiveness of this procedure, in gaining proper control over central responsibility for expenditures depends on how well the Board of Public Affairs performs its function of a budget commission. Will it get the necessary information? A mere checking of accounts each month is not sufficient. A thorough study of departmental activities, of methods and costs, is necessary. On the adequacy and completeness of the facts presented will rest the question of whether or not the legislature will accept the board's recommendations, or if he will fall back on the old system.

This question is vital to the people of Wisconsin. Much of the future of economy and efficiency in state affairs depends on it. It is a question which people should keep in mind. Will not questions from citizens, and a demand for full publicity on budget matters help much in bringing about the best possible use of this opportunity to get solid in state finance?

THE VICE-PRESIDENTS.

The office of vice-president is one of the greatest in the gift of the American people. According to past history, a vice-president stands about one chance in five of succeeding to the highest American office. In this country, as in no other, the people are not allowed to lose sight of the fact that the office of president is not a mere title, but a position of great responsibility. The chances for the advancement of his successor become more numerous.

Yet the filling of this important office on whose hands the entire responsibility of leadership may be thrown at any minute, is always an arduous task. The political conventions always make their nominations for the place amid the hurry of leaving. The delegates are anxious to get home. They give but scant thought to the choice that may have far-reaching results on the national life.

It is customary to nominate a vice-president as a kind of consolation prize to some element, state, or section that might consider itself slighted in the presidential choice. The history of American politics has seen some very eccentric awards of this honor and responsibility.

The next four years promise to be very critical ones in our history. The field of international relations, which for so many years, was so little disturbed, is ominous with threats of trouble. Not merely is a strong man needed in the White House, but a strong man is needed in the possible successor. In these times of stress, some fanatic in a moment of stress might easily put the president out of the way, in spite of the best vigilance of secret service men. Another man equally capable should be ready to step into his shoes.

A peculiar duty therefore rests on both a national convention of next summer, to make fit nominations for this office. The position should not be handed out as a political plum to someone who could never hope to aspire directly to the presidency. It should really go to the convention's second choice for president, to the one who seemed to have the greatest strength and the best qualifications for the office. The nominee for the higher place. No statesman should consider himself above accepting this position with its peculiar responsibilities.

IS ON DECK.

One of the most patriotic and wisest—as well as briefest—speeches heard during the present session of congress was that delivered by Representative Mann, the republican leader, in support of preparedness. Wholly ignoring the fact that President Wilson had borrowed this policy from the republicans and disregarding all partisan considerations, Mr. Mann made a forceful appeal for preparedness. He frankly confessed that he had been accurately described as "a little Navy and Army" man in the past, but said that he had come to appreciate the view of the European war, the distributive conditions of the world and the futility of treaties, that it would be criminal for those charged with the conduct of the nation's affairs to postpone preparations for adequate self-defense in any emergency. He said he had become convinced that the army should be increased to 250,000 or 300,000 men, that the coast defenses should be augmented, and that the navy should be made adequate to defend this country at sea. He added that the industrial resources of the country should also be mobilized in some way for the building up of our home industries so that if we become involved in war we may be able to live within ourselves.

TRUST TO LUCK.

The decision of the supreme court that the income tax contained in the Underwood tariff bill is entirely constitutional has inspired the democratic leaders with the belief that they can, by an extension of its provisions, make good in large measure the huge deficit which has resulted from democratic tariff legislation. As has been pointed out in this correspondence, the income tax is peculiarly popular with the democrats because it affords the machinery whereby they are able to tax the industry and enterprise of the northern states to raise the revenues which they expend with a lavish hand in those southern states which are notably lacking in both these elements. Representative Hull of Tennessee, asserts that it will now be possible to raise $195,000,000 by means of an income tax, where only between $85,000,000 and $90,000,000 was raised before. As the states which compose "the solid South" pay only the present law, only $1,500,000 out of the total of upwards of $85,000,000 income tax collected, democratic enthusiasm for an increase of this method of raising revenue is not surprising.

There is much talk about inducing more men to become school teachers, but so far not many of them have given up $4.00 a day job as railroad men or bricklayers in order to accept $15 a week in the school room.

The National Guard can be successfully used for defense in case of war, merely by asking permission of forty-eight governors and state legislatures every time an order is issued to them. All bosh!

The mothers may feel pleased to see how many cities their boys know about, and may think they are doing geography very hard, but this information perhaps comes largely from reading the sporting news.

No matter how hard the young folks prepare for monthly exams, the teachers have a fatal gift for asking questions they forgot to look up.

President Wilson's speeches in favor of preparedness are heard with enthusiasm wherever he proposes to spend government money.

It is very doubtful if this country will ever stand compulsory military service merely to prevent Japan from juggling off the Philippines.

How One Cow Came Home.

N. J. Ohlson's big gray cow broke out of the pen on his South Dakota farm, here Sunday afternoon, and you bet your sweet life it took a crowd going about to capture the dogging animal, but at last Horseman Paulus Anderson at the business end of a 50-foot rope, just about the floodtide of her dices and antics, lassoed the critter and placed her upon the defuncted hurricane deck of a jumping jehosapha, she can run 'em some and save her behind a wagon.—Pioneer correspondent Volusia County (Florida) Record.

Old Si.

Old Si McGuggin's as bald as a bat. Not no single hair has he under his hat. It makes him feel real sorry when would-be wits stop and say, "Si, I see that you've come out on top." And when in the chair at the barber's he sits, it riles him to find that the room's full of wits. "Well, what will it be?" asks the man at the chair. And Si will reply, "Can't you see? But was talking on when Peeweepele smiled and had something to say. 'A feller this morning, said you was bright,' the storekeeper said, 'an' I thought he was right. You're not only bright but you're shiny, by gee!' Then Peeweepele laughed and old Ezra McGee. Old Si McGuggin was terribly sore and, frowning, he hobbled straight out of the store. Si took a long walk—then he returned to the place where Peeweepele stood with a smile on his face. Said he, 'I'd jest like to inform you, friend Bud, that that balding fellow grows best in mud.' Then Si sat down and he laughed till he cried, while Peeweepele scowled and McGee really giggled. So pleased was old Si about the red necktie and wore it that night.

The Fifth Wife.

The old negro had been arrested for having more than one wife, the last woman being the complainant. He happened to be well known locally and an orderly character. "How many wives have you had?" demanded the judge. "Six, yo' honah," was the reply. "Why couldn't you get along with them?" the judge insisted. "Well, judge, de first two spiled de white folks' clothes when dey washed um; de third wren't no cook; de foth was jes nacherally lazy, en de fift—I'll, tell you jedge—the fift, 'Incompatibility,' de court suggested.

"No, yo, honah," said the old negro, slowly. "It wren't nothin' lak dat. Jes couldn't get along wid her unless yo' wuz somewhere else."

Feminine styles are ridiculous, of course, but it took men something over 100 years to discover that a boiled shirt didn't do to cook; do on over the head, like a mother-hubard wrapper.

I saw three girls far up the street All clad alike from head to feet. I waited till they nearer drew That I might get a better view Of those three chickens! Each showed that brought them nearer How much to distance judgment owed.

For soon I recognized each face. The Browns, Grandmama, Mamma and Grace.

Ain't style the chickens?

PLANS BEING MADE FOR COUNTY FAIR

Rock County Fair Management Plan Many New Things for Coming Fair in the Fall.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Evansville, Feb. 3.—The management of the big Rock county fair are already busy making arrangements for the 1916 fair, which promises to exceed all former fairs. Several novel things are being worked out, which will prove interesting to fair goers. Already inquiries are being made for space in the concession department and many of the large exhibitors of stock, who exhibited at the fair last year, have already signified their intention of coming again this year. A novel feature of advertising was worked out by the directors at a recent meeting, the idea of increasing the attendance over that of any previous fair. Col. D. F. Finnane, the well known auctioneer, has been appointed to solicit advertising in the new premium book. A building committee, consisting of C. P. Jorgensen, Manuel Lewis and D. E. Finnane were appointed and it is expected that numerous improvements will be made. Among the things being planned for the fair is a show horse, a well known exhibitor of draft horses at state fairs in the past, has signified his intention of exhibiting at this year's fair. A contract was entered into today by the management for a high class merry-go-round and ferris wheel, which will be of special interest to the children. D. W. Anderson, agent for Milwaukee, where he will attend the hardware dealers' convention held there.

Ralph Graves of Brooklyn, was a local visitor yesterday. H. S. McGiffen of Sparta, is here for a few days on business. W. Halstead was a Janesville visitor Tuesday.

E. Wilson of Edgerton, was in this city on business yesterday. Earl Tullar was a Janesville visitor Tuesday.

Jack Farnsworth of Brooklyn, was a local shopper yesterday. A. B. Harte was a business visitor at Superior, Wis., yesterday.

Amsterdam, Netherlands, Feb. 3.—Dutch Socialists conceive it to be their special task to bring together nations for common action against the war. In this they have so far not succeeded, owing chiefly to the refusal of the French and German Socialists.

JANESVILLE DOCTOR CLAIMS SURE CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS

DR. H. L. MOTTARD, CHIROPRACTOR, ANNOUNCES HE HOLDS FORMULA TO OFFSET PHTHISIS SCOURGE.

PLAN TO EXPERIMENT

Doctors and Surgeons of International Reputations Using Cure In Demonstrations.

One bran mash of eighteen different varieties of roots and herbs is the latest cure for tuberculosis, it has been brought to the attention of the medical world. According to Dr. H. L. Mottard, a chiropractor with offices in the Hayes building, who holds the formula, it is a sure cure.

Like Babcock, who invented the milk tester and gave his invention gratis to the world, and Pasteur, who discovered the germ that causes off and combat lockjaw, Dr. Mottard today announced his readiness to permit any physician or surgeon in the world the use of his cure for experimental purposes. But he will not disclose his formula.

Dr. Mottard was interviewed this morning in his office. He had much to say of the cure and the attempts of outside physicians to secure his formula. One telegram he had from a well known Chicago doctor read: "Sixty dollars to you on receipt of cure, forty to the man who has been pronounced a medical name for it, 'Phthisis'."

Originated in Germany. Asked the origin of the formula, Dr. Mottard said it came from Germany. He said the formula was related to him by an old German lady. She brought the recipe from the old country, he said. Some time ago it was lost. He learned from her and his possibilities and urged the securing of another. Incidentally the woman wrote to relatives in the old country and asked them to find the formula. This was two or three years ago.

At that time the doctor said he first realized the tremendous aid to humanity the formula would eventually furnish. He said he had seen hundreds of thousands of souls withering to death in practically every hamlet on the globe. He recognized the lifelong untiring but fruitless efforts of scientists and doctors to discover a tuberculous cure. With the perfection of a cure millions upon millions would reap untold benefits now and in future years.

In his office this morning were several of the most distinguished doctors containing the roots and herbs. To the eye of a high school botany student the latter would judge the contents of the bag as hayseed, clover, corn meal and the roots and bushes of the ordinary plants and bushes of the field. But instead, the doctor said, they were imported roots and herbs which in former times were sold for enormous prices. He said he had seen the recipe that performed the first feat.

A young man who was in the stages of pulmonary tuberculosis. In some manner the attention of the old woman was called to the case, and when attending doctors announced that the man's trouble was tuberculosis she started them with the declaration that she could cure him.

She mixed her herbs and roots and boiled them for about half an hour. In the morning she fed the sick man the mash and continued to do so for some time. Three weeks later the patient was convalescent. Today he is well and hearty and is employed in a Kaukauna store.

"Three weeks is all I ask before results will be shown," said Dr. Mottard. "In that period the action of the formula which I hold will have completed its work. I do not claim that it will cure all kinds of tuberculosis. It will not, or at least it has not as yet been perfected to that point of curing the bone trouble. The great work it does is to cure that which attacks the lungs. I know it will do this, for I have personally witnessed it done."

"The lungs of the man at Kaukauna were in a very bad shape but yet when given this mash of herbs and roots he at once began to improve, and today is well and healthy without a trace of the disease."

Chicago medical men of big international reputation and standing are now experimenting with the cure, according to Dr. Mottard. For the present, however, he has disposed of his formula to get your cure before the people, and I am in a position to get your story into all the large papers here, being an old newspaper man, and I am sure the news of the cure through the mails, Dr. Mottard thought that it would be best to prove his cure more certainly before starting such a venture.

Every doctor who wrote him was highly desirous of securing the formula, but the chiropractor is determined to guard his secret for the present at least.

BEGGS UNDERWEAR BE SENT TO HIM IN RUSS PRISON

Cousin of Valentine Bier of Harmony Penna Pathetic Note for Clothes to Keep Him Warm.

Chilly north blasts and sub-zero temperatures of Janesville and vicinity may be aggravating, but read this: Beresowka Prison, Siberia, Russia.

Dear Uncle: I have sent you many cards but I am firm in the belief that none have arrived at the destination. Therefore, I am trying again, in hopes that, perhaps you, Dear Uncle, I implore, I beg of you, to send me a few things in underwear, shirts and the like.

Dear Uncle, I implore you, once more to grant this one request if it reaches you. I have been in military prison after being wounded, but am now on the road to recovery. I have written home to Keshoff (Germany) many times but have as yet received no word from home.

I send you my heartfelt regards and wish you to send my best wishes to my relatives in your country for which I thank you sincerely in advance. Your devoted cousin, ADOLPH SCHNEIDER.

Such was the correspondence on a Russian Military postal card yesterday received by Valentine Bier, a German farmer living in the town of Harmony. Schneider is his nephew.

Mr. Bier came to Janesville this morning, purchased a large amount of wearing apparel and forwarded it by express to his nephew. Whether or not it will ever reach its destination is a matter of speculation.

From the copy of the message a fair idea of the status of prisoners in Russian prisons and detention camps can be gained. Other details disclosed the fact that the prisoners had not had a change of underwear in over a year. Whatever the man wears now must be very scanty or either he is adept with the needle.

BLEASDALE WINNER AS CRACK MARKSMAN

Young Janesville Boy Wins High Honor in Marine Corps as Crack Shot. —Expect Him to Break Record.

In an official bulletin issued by Headquarters, United States Marine Corps, Washington, appears the name of Victor F. Bleasdale of this place, as having qualified as a marksman in that corps. The bulletin also states that the fact that the prisoner had not had a change of underwear in over a year. Whatever the man wears now must be very scanty or either he is adept with the needle.

Victor, who is a son of Joseph Bleasdale, R. D. No. 5, Janesville, enlisted in the United States Marine Corps at its Chicago, Ill. recruiting station on May 15, 1915, and is now serving with the expeditionary force of marines landed in Haiti for the protection of American interests in that war-torn little island.

Considering the fact that Bleasdale is scarcely more than a recruit, his performance in gunnery is considered by Marine Corps officials as little short of marvelous and they expect him to break many marksmanship records before his enlistment expires.

ICE JAM THREATENS TOWN LINE BRIDGE; BLOCKS INTERURBAN

Business Districts of Beloit and Rockford May be Flooded When Gorge Breaks—Water Backed Up for Miles.

Beloit, Feb. 3.—Interurban service between Janesville and Beloit is broken off and the Town Line bridge, six miles north of Beloit, is threatened with being carried out as a result of an ice jam in Rock river.

Should the jam break the entire business district of Beloit and cities of Rockton and Rockford, Ill., would be flooded. Already the water here is three feet above normal.

The jam started to collect two miles north of Beloit yesterday. This morning the water was higher, nearly two miles of road and railroad track between here and Janesville being under four feet of water. Rock river for a distance of five miles is a solid field of ice.

Another Jam at Narrows. An ice jam has formed at the narrows, eight miles up the river from this city, and has backed up the water toward the Fulton and Indian Ford dams, disabling the power plants. In case of a sudden break it will aggravate the flood conditions of Rock river in this city.

The river was 27½ inches above government mark at the electric company's power plant at the upper dam this afternoon. This is a fall of one and a quarter inches from last night. The plant at Monterey is affected as a result of the back water from the ice jam at the Town Line bridge.

THE GIRL AND THE GAME...

Copyright 1915 by Frank H. Spurman.

Seagrue listened with set face. The low-toned conference lasted longer. At its close the two separated. Shortly afterward, Capelle, in Seagrue's motor car, started rapidly for the city.

At nearly twelve o'clock that night—some time after the house was quiet—Seagrue, leaving his room, went down to the library. He unlocked the terrace doors. Capelle's men were outside. They entered and Seagrue led them before the safe. The criminal expert of the pair made hardly more than a pretense of dropping the tumblers for an opening. He had come prepared for any eventuality, and the moment he saw the mechanism of the lock was unassailable he directed his companion, Hyde, to connect up the drills; his orders from Capelle were to open the safe.

Upstairs, Helen, in slumber, was half-awakened by a whistle signal. Storm was bringing a freight train down the hill to wait for the midnight flyer. The rumble of passing trains rarely disturbed her. This night a much lighter but an unusual sound woke her completely. She sat up a moment, listening. It seemed close—someone was in the house. Turning on a light and dressing hastily, Helen opened the hall door of her room.

She had been careful not to make the slightest noise in her movements. Unfortunately the light behind her silhouetted her figure on the floor at the foot of the broad flight of stairs. Spike, keen-eyed, in the library, saw it. He touched Hyde. "Douse it!" he muttered.

Hyde extinguished the light. The two paused, listened, walked into the hall and paused again. Then they started noiselessly up the stairs. Guarded as they had been, Helen felt their presence. With fast-beating heart she ran to her window. Out in the night she could see the light of a torch. It was Storm's light, carried as he worked around his engine. Catching up a small serving bell she ran out on her balcony and trying the bell to the telephone wire that connected with the main line wires, she started the jingling messenger off for help.

The engine man, busy with his work, presently heard the slight jingle, but only to wonder for a moment what it could be. The two criminals had entered Helen's room. The instant she stepped in from the balcony they caught and overpowered her—stuffed her screams, and in spite of her continuing struggles, rudely gagged her.

The bell again attracted Storm's attention, and he was puzzled to determine what it might mean. Looking toward Helen's home he saw a bright light in one of the upper windows. Then, of a sudden, he saw more—silhouetted against the pane, a woman and a man were struggling. He alarmed the crew and ran swiftly up the hill for General Holmes' house.

In the interval, leaving Helen helpless, the safe-blowers descended the stairs. Holmes and Rhineland had likewise been awakened by the muffled sounds of the struggle and the two appeared in the upper hall. Seagrue joined them and with his uncle hurried into Helen's room, where she was trying to release herself. But her father, turning down stairs, had interrupted the two safe-blowers at the very library door. The old soldier was no match for the two men, but he tackled them together. He had hardly begun to fight when he was struck down by a black-jack and the two thugs, survey in hand, made their escape. They crossed the lawn, gained the shrubbery close to the gate, and in the distance saw the headlight of the midnight passenger train. Signal was not one of its stops, but the safe-blowers ran hard for the station and taking a long chance for their getaway they recklessly but safely boarded the running train as it slowed somewhat for the bridge.

In the confusion within the household Helen had been released. She had hysterically told her story and as she and her friends rushed down stairs she encountered Storm, who had helped her dashed father to a chair. "Are you hurt, daddy?" asked his daughter anxiously.

"No," he cried, "and I've given one of them a jolt he'll remember. But Helen!"—in his agitation he laid his hand heavily on his daughter's shoulder—"those damned scoundrels have got our survey!"

"Then they shall never get off with it," exclaimed Helen with flashing eyes. "We will catch them if it kills somebody."

She gave her orders right and left—for caring for her father, calling the police and for making the pursuit. The boarding of the moving passenger train by the two men had not escaped Storm's eyes, and a few words with Helen were enough to clear things. The flyer was gone and the burglars with it, but there was a chance yet to get them. Hastening with Storm down the hill, Helen told him the whole story. When the two reached the siding Storm asked the conductor to put out a flagman to protect the freight; he half lifted and half pushed Helen up into the cab, and the instant the fireman cut off the engine, started in pursuit of the fast-receding passenger train.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

BY DAISY DEAN

Recent changes among the photo players have brought about a capture, of Virginia Pearson and Alma Hanlon.

Theda Bara may find a rival in Miss Pearson for it was on the stage that the latter won fame as the original creator of the vampire in "A Fool There Was," and it was in the film version of that play that Theda Bara made her first screen appearance and won a name.

Miss Hanlon comes from an old English family of actors who have all been on the stage. She will make her first appearance in pictures with Theda Bara in "Gold and the Woman."

TALE OF THE WEST

One of the latest releases, "A Knight of the Range," starring Harry D. Carey, is a picture in which real western stuff predominates.

The story concerns the love affairs of Bess Dawson and Bob Graham. Bob is a weakling, and Gentleman Dick, a gambler, plans his downfall because he loves Bess himself.

Then there is Cheyenne Harry, another lover of the girl, who because he thinks so much of her, does all he can to help Bob. He even takes the blame when a stage is held up, but the truth leaks out.

Bob shows his real character when he tries to incriminate Harry before Bess and he is forced to flee a posse. In a fight he is killed, and Bess discovers she really loves Cheyenne Harry best of all.

Jack Richardson and Anna Little prove their real ability as screen stars in a dramatic pictureization of a man's regeneration, "According to St. John," a photoplay now in construction. It is the story of a man who came to scoff and stayed to pray, and is one of the strongest "evangelistic" type of picture ever produced.

Kitty Gordon, in the new picture "As in a Looking Glass," wears in addition to twenty-five marvelous

WHAT CHILDREN NEED NOW

In spite of the best care mothers can give them this weather brings sickness to many children. Safe, reliable family medicines are in demand. Mrs. T. Neureuter, East Claire, Wis., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar cured my boy of a severe attack of croup after other remedies had failed. I recommend it to everyone as we know from our experience that it is a wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. It stops the coughs that hang on and weakens after the la-grippe."—W. T. Sherer.

gowns, an imported hat on which there is $300 worth of aligettes.

Second baseman Kenworthy of the Kansas City Feds is one of the out-law circuit players who believes, he is just the man to fill the reported vacancy at second base for Cleveland. In fact, he told manager Lee Fohl that much in writing to the chief of the Indians in a recent letter. Manager Fohl, however, was forced to write him that there was no chance of his being made an offer as he counted on Terry Turner playing second base for the Indians. Kenworthy clouted the ball for a .229 average last season, but was not a brilliant infielder.

MUCH COMEDY IN THE PICTURE "JANE"

Charlotte Greenwood and Sidney Grant Seen in Famous Play.

One paroxysm of laughter followed another at the Apollo yesterday in the unveiling of the famous Frohman comedy, "Jane." One could not watch Charlotte Greenwood for long without forgetting the blues entirely. Her partner, Sidney Grant, held up his end of the comedy duet far better than he held the washerwoman's baby. In the cast were also Forest Stanley, Myrtle Stegman and Herbert Standing.

While this comedy is two decades old it is just as amusing as when Boston witnessed Charles Frohman's early efforts. The situations in the pictured version are funnier than ever. After witnessing a picture like "Jane" one realizes the absurdity of slapstick comedy.

The Triangle made its second appearance at the Princess Theatre last night when it featured Douglas Fairbanks and Senna Owen in a delightful comedy drama "The Lamb." Its main object was the strengthening of a coward, who discovering by means of sweetheart that although he made good social scenery he was lacking in the qualities of a real man. Most of the scenes were taken on the Mexican border and the battles with an Indian tribe seemed very realistic. Both stars took their parts in the best of manner.

With the able assistance of Mable Normand and Mack Sennett, Raymond Hitchcock took off the big laugh of the evening in the form of a uproariously funny Keystone farce, "My Valet," full of serious complications and heart throbs. Both features will be shown again this evening at the Princess.

AT THE PRINCESS.

"The Lamb" Tonight Again.

Few other film plays have ever come to New York that received such unanimous and hearty praise as "The Lamb." The New York Tribune said, "The Lamb" outdoes "The Birth of a Nation" in its thrills; the New York Herald, "Here Triangle triumphed;" New York American, "The fights between the Yaquis and the Lamb and the rescue by the United States cavalry were quite as thrilling as the most thrilling episodes in 'The Birth of a Nation.'"

New York Sun, "A happy blending of pathos, humor and stirring action combined to make the program one of extraordinary interest." New York World, "Triangle plays score a big hit at the Knickerbocker."

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Lamb," it should be added, does not constitute the entire entertainment at the Princess tonight. A good comedy by Mack Sennett is also included.

"DAMAGED GOODS" STRIKES HOME

Vivid Drama Concerning Moral Uplift Frankly Displayed at Myers Theatre.

Gold facts can not be hidden, nor were they left in obscurity yesterday when the much talked of moral drama appeared in picture form at the Myers Theatre. "Damaged Goods" proved to be the foundation which this wonderful story lesson was based on, vividly picturing to good sized audiences the terrible consequences of vice and physical ruin that swoops down upon humanity, following the abuse of moral law. If you came to the theatre with the idea of being shocked, you most likely accomplished your purpose, but if you came with the object of absorbing good (having the ability of turning bad into good) this stirring plea for a purer life could not help but stir your better self. Every detail was based in hideous frankness in the picture's successful attempt to expose the tainted stain which vain society tries to cover.

Richard Bennett and in fact, the whole cast took their parts in a very creditable manner; each one displaying different ideals in the many characters of life to a very realistic degree.

The comedy work of Irish Ed, Lucas and Dutch Walter Van is a sure cure for melancholy and a bouncer for the blues. The ballads of Golden Voiced George Atkinson has endeared him to the theatre-going public in years past and his first entrance today has the same effect as the sunshine on spring flowers. Besides one of the funniest burlesques ever written, featuring their beauty chorus in many new and novel songs and dance numbers they have an extra good feature Oljo Bill. FIXES A STANDARD FOR GLUTEN FOODS

United States Department of Agriculture Issues Decision on Gluten Products and Diabetic Food

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—Food inspection decision No. 160, recently issued by the United States department of agriculture, for the guidance of officers of the department in enforcing the food and drugs act, fixes a definite limit to the amount of starch and sugar that may be present in certain gluten products and diabetic foods, and also fixes the amount of nitrogen that must be present in certain of these products, and makes requirements as to moisture and other constituents. The decision covers ground gluten, gluten flour, self-rising gluten flour, and diabetic foods. The definitions and standards as stated in the food inspection decision were recommended by the joint committee on definitions and standards, consisting of representatives of the United States department of agriculture, the Association of American Dairy, Food and Drug Officials, and the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists. These two associations have previously adopted the definitions and standards.

Investigations by the officials in charge of the enforcement of the food and drugs act have shown that various food products have been placed on the market from time to time that are recommended by the manufacturers for use by people suffering from diabetes. It is generally held that the best food suited to persons suffering from diabetes are those which contain little or no starch and sugar. Some of the foods placed on the market and recommended by the manufacturers for use in diabetes have been found to contain nearly as much starch and sugar as ordinary products, so that they were of no more value in the treatment of diabetes than ordinary food products that could be purchased cheaply. The diabetic patient who avoids ordinary food products that contain considerable quantities of starch and sugar, as the composition of these products are generally known, in the case of prepared foods advertised for use in diabetes, however, the patient may be misled into eating quantities of starch and sugar that might be positively injurious.

Hereafter such products should meet the requirements of food inspection decision No. 160, which are as follows: Ground gluten is the clean, sound product made from wheat flour by the almost complete removal of starch and contains not more than ten per cent (10%) of moisture, and, calculated on a dry basis, not less than four per cent (4%) of nitrogen-free extract (using the protein factor 5.7), and not more than five and five-tenths per cent (5.5%) of starch (as determined by the diastase method).

Gluten flour is the clean, sound product made from wheat flour by the removal of a large part of the starch and contains not more than ten per cent (10%) of moisture, and, calculated on a dry basis, not less than seven and one-tenth (7.1%) of nitrogen-free extract (using the protein factor 5.7), and not more than forty-four per cent (44%) of starch (as determined by the diastase method).

Gluten flour, self-rising, is a gluten flour containing not more than ten per cent (10%) of moisture, and leavening agents with or without salt. "Diabetic" food. Although most foods may be suitable under certain conditions for the use of persons suffering from diabetes, the term "diabetic" as applied to food indicates a considerable lessening of the carbohydrate found in ordinary products of the same class, and this belief is fostered by many manufacturers on their labels and in their advertising literature.

A "diabetic" food contains not more than half as much glycogenic carbohydrates as the normal food of the same class. Any statement on the label which gives the impression that any single food in unlimited quantities is suitable for the diabetic patient is false and misleading.

The foregoing definitions and standards are adopted as a guide for the officials of this department in enforcing the Food and Drugs act.

West Center, Feb. 2.—Mrs. Dorothea Sornow was born November 4, 1828 in Mecklenburg Germany. She was married in 1854. Her husband died in 1880. She came to this country in 1886 and for many years she has lived in the home of her son, William, where she received the very best of care and where she died last Saturday, January 30th. She leaves three sons, Williams of the town of Center, August of Nebraska, and Ludwig of Germany, thirteen grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. The funeral was held from the home of her son Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock and from the Lutheran church at two o'clock. Rev. F. W. Wenzel officiating. The pall bearers were Fred Gundack, Fred Albrecht, Christ Harnack, Chris Elser, Fred Nachtigal and John Guhl.

Mrs. Sornow's maiden name was Brockman. She was an invalid for several years and her son and his wife deserve much credit for the way they took care of her. It would be well for others to copy from them in the care of their aged parents. She was a beautiful Christian character, but as her mental constitution grew gradually worse it became very difficult to care for her. She is now relieved from all sorrow and pain. She was interred in Bethel cemetery.

What is a farmer's wife?

Is she a drudge? Does each day bring her nothing but grinding, humdrum toil—each night nothing but numb exhaustion? It used to be so.

That's why thousands of women who loved the thought of farm life have shrunk from its realities.

But to-day they're helping farm housewives to make work easier, home cheerier, and a woman's life on the farm really worth living.

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Easily and Cheaply
Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex and make it into a pint of cough syrup, and watch the cough vanish.

Four the 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of most effective remedy, at a saving of 80 cents. It is usually prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keep perfectly and has a pleasant taste.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in vitamin, which is so leading to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Lone Wolf

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

(Copyright by Louis Joseph Vance)

Without other response he leaned forward and tapped the glass, signaling the driver to stop. And as the cab swerved sharply in toward the curb he laid hold of the door-latch. "Lucy," he pleaded, "don't let me go believing—"

She seemed suddenly infused with a cold, implacable hostility.

"I tell you," she said cruelly, "I don't care what you think, so long as you go!"

The face she now showed him was ashen, his mouth was hard, her eyes blazed feverishly.

And then, as still he hesitated, the cab pulled up, and the driver, leaning back, unlatched the door and threw it open.

With a curt, resigned inclination of the head Lanyard rose and got out.

Immediately the girl grasped the speaking-tube, the door slammed, the cab drew away, and left him standing with the pose, the gesture of one who has just heard sentence of death pronounced on him.

When he roused to know his surroundings he found himself standing on a corner of the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne.

It was bitter cold in the wind sweeping down from the west, and it had grown very dark. Only in the sky above the Bois a long reef of crimson light hung motionless, against which the leafless trees of the avenue lifted their gaunt, weird silhouettes.

While he watched the crimson ebbed swiftly and gave way to mauve, to violet, to black.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Apostate.

When there was no more light in the sky a profound sigh escaped Lanyard's lips, and with a slight nod toward the place where the light had been, and the gesture of one who recognizes and signifies submission to an omen, he turned and tramped heavily back across town.

At one stage of his journey he turned aside and, more through habit than desire or design, entered a cheap eating-place and consumed his evening meal without the slightest comprehension of what he ate or whether the food were good or poor.

When he had finished he fled the place like a haunted man.

Quite without purpose he sought the machine shop where he had left his car.

He had no plans; but it was in his mind, a murderous thought, that before another day dawned he might come face to face with Bannan.

Meanwhile he would go to work. He could think out his problems while driving his cab as well as in seclusion; and whatever he ultimately decided to do, he could accomplish little before midnight; finally, it was quite within the bounds of possibility that his car would prove a valuable asset to whatever course of action he might elect to pursue.

Toward seven o'clock, with his machine in perfect running order, he mounted to the seat and took to the streets in reckless humor—the temper of a beast of prey.

The barrier was down—once more the Lone Wolf was on the prowl.

But for the present he controlled himself and acted perfectly his temporary role of taxi-hand, fellow to those thousand that infest Paris. People hailed him from sidewalks and restaurants half a dozen times in the course of the next three hours; he took them up, carried them to their several destinations, received payment, and acknowledged their gratuities with perfunctory thanks—all thoroughly in character and all with little conscious thought.

He saw but one thing, the face of Lucy Shannon, white, tense, glimmering wanly in shadows—the face with which she had dismissed him.

He had but one thought—the desire to read the riddle of her bondage. To accomplish this he was prepared to go to any extreme; if Bannan and his crew came between him and his purpose, so much the worse for them—and, incidentally, so much the better for society! What might happen to himself was of no moment.

He entertained but one design, to become again what he had been, the supreme adventurer, the prince of plunderers, to lose himself once more in the suspense of adventurous days and the delirium of peril-haunted nights, to reincarnate the Lone Wolf and in his guise loot the world anew—to court oblivion even at the prison's gates.

It was after ten when, cruising purposelessly, without a fare, he swung through the Rue Aubier into the Place de l'Opera, and approaching the Cafe de la Paix, was halted by a doorway of that restaurant.

Drawing in to the curb with the indifference that had distinguished his every action of the evening, he waited with a throbbing motor and mind detached and gaze remote from the tides of foot and wheeled traffic brawling past on either hand.

After a moment two figures, both masculine, issued from the revolving door of the cafe and approached the cab. Lanyard paid them no attention. In his preoccupation he would have needed only the repetition of an address in his ear and the noise of the cab door slammed to send him off like a shot.

But he received no such order; there was a pause; then he heard one of the men cough heavily, and in a twinkling Lanyard had stiffened to rigidity in his seat. If he had heard that cough but once before, that once had been too often. Without a glance askance, hardening his features to absolute immobility, he knew that the cough was "shaking" the slighter of those two figures.

And of a sudden he was acutely conscious of the clearness of the frosty atmosphere, of the merciless glare of electricity beating upon him from every side. And poignantly he regretted neglecting to mask himself with his goggles.

He wasn't left long in suspense. The coughing died away by spasms, followed by the unmistakably sonorous accents of Bannan's voice.

"Well, dear boy! I have to thank you for an excellent dinner and a most interesting evening. Pity to break it up so early. Still, business—you know! Sorry you're not going my way—but that's a good-looking taxi you've drawn. What's its number—eh?"

"That you, Lanyard?"

"Wertheimer, eh?"

"Right! The old man had me puzzled for a minute with his silly chaffing. Stupid of me, too, because we'd just been talking about you."

"Had you, though?"

"Rather. Hadn't you better take me where we can have a quiet little talk?"

"I'm not conscious of the necessity—"

"Oh, I say!" Wertheimer protested amiably. "Don't be so rotten silly. old top. Give a chap a chance. Besides, I received today a bit of news from Antwerp I guarantee will interest you."

"Antwerp?" Lanyard repeated, mystified.

"Antwerp—where the ships sail from," Wertheimer laughed. "Not Amsterdam, where the diamonds foregather, as you may know."

"I don't follow you, I'm afraid."

"I shan't elucidate until we're under cover."

With brief hesitation Lanyard said more placably: "All right. But where shall I take you?"

"Any quiet cafe will do. You can readily find one."

"Thanks—no," Lanyard objected dryly. "If I must confabulate with gentlemen of your kidney, I prefer to do it under cover. Even dressed as I am, I might be recognized, you know."

But it was evident that Wertheimer didn't mean to permit himself to be rumbled.

"Here's a Franc for You."

"Haven't the faintest notion," a British voice drawled in response. "Never bother about a taxi's number until it has run over me."

"Great mistake," Bannan rejoined cheerfully. "Always take your taxi's number before entering. Then, if anything happens—However, that's a good-looking chap at the wheel—doesn't look as if he'd run you into any trouble."

"Oh, I fancy not," said the Englishman, bored.

"Still, you never can tell. There's the number on the lamp. Make a note of it and be on the safe side. Or trust me—I never forget numbers!"

With this speech Bannan ranged alongside Lanyard and looked him over, keenly malicious enjoyment gleaming in his evil old eyes.

"You are an honest-looking chap," he commented with a suspicion of a mocking smile, but in a tone of the most inoffensive admiration—"honest and—ah—what shall I say?—what the world we're all using nowadays—efficient! Honest and efficient-looking, capable of better things, or I'm no judge! Forgive an old man's candor, my friend—and take good care of our British cousin here. He doesn't know his way around Paris very well. Still I feel confident he'll come to no harm in your company. Here's a franc for you."

With matchless effrontery he produced a coin from the change pocket of his fur-lined coat and offered it to Lanyard.

Unhesitatingly, permitting no expression to color his features, Lanyard extended his palm, received the coin, dropped it into his own pocket, and carried two fingers to the vizio of his cap.

"Merci, monsieur," he said evenly.

"Ah, that's the right spirit!" the deep voice jeered. "Never be above your station, my man—never hesitate to take a tip! Here, I'll give you another, gratis—get out of this business; you're too good for it. Don't ask me how I know; I can tell by your face. Hello! Why, you're turning down the flag? You haven't started yet!"

"Conversation goes up on the clock," Lanyard replied stolidly in French.

He turned and faced Bannan squarely, loosing a glance of venomous hatred into the other's eyes. "The longer I have to stop here listening to your senile monologue," he added with unmistakable meaning, "the more you'll have to pay. What address, please?"

He added, turning back to get a glimpse of his passenger.

"Hotel Astoria," the porter supplied. "Very good."

The porter closed the door.

"But remember my advice," Bannan counseled coolly, stepping back and waving his hand to the man in the cab. "Good night."

Without noticing him further, Lanyard took his car smartly away from the curb, wheeled round the corner into the Boulevard des Capucines, and made toward the Rue Royale.

CHAPTER XXV.

A Surprise.

He had gone but a block when the window at his back was lowered and his fare observed pleasantly:

"That you, Lanyard?"

The adventurer hesitated an instant; then, without looking round, responded:

"Wertheimer, eh?"

"Right! The old man had me puzzled for a minute with his silly chaffing. Stupid of me, too, because we'd just been talking about you."

"Had you, though?"

"Rather. Hadn't you better take me where we can have a quiet little talk?"

"I'm not conscious of the necessity—"

"Oh, I say!" Wertheimer protested amiably. "Don't be so rotten silly. old top. Give a chap a chance. Besides, I received today a bit of news from Antwerp I guarantee will interest you."

"Antwerp?" Lanyard repeated, mystified.

"Antwerp—where the ships sail from," Wertheimer laughed. "Not Amsterdam, where the diamonds foregather, as you may know."

"I don't follow you, I'm afraid."

"I shan't elucidate until we're under cover."

With brief hesitation Lanyard said more placably: "All right. But where shall I take you?"

"Oh, I fancy not," said the Englishman, bored.

"Still, you never can tell. There's the number on the lamp. Make a note of it and be on the safe side. Or trust me—I never forget numbers!"

With this speech Bannan ranged alongside Lanyard and looked him over, keenly malicious enjoyment gleaming in his evil old eyes.

"Then will my modest diggings suit you?" he suggested pleasantly. "I've taken a suite in the Rue Vernet, just back of the Hotel Astoria, where we can be as private as you please. That is, if you've no objection."

"None whatever."

Wertheimer gave him the number and replaced the window.

"Took the tip from you," he told Lanyard, as he unlocked the door. "I dare say you'd be glad to get back to that little rez-de-chaussee of yours in the Rue Roget. Rippling place, that. By the way—judging from your apparently robust state of health, you haven't been trying to live at home of late."

"Indeed?"

"Indeed yes, monsieur! If I may presume to interfere—I'd pull wide of the Rue Roget for a while—for as long, at least as you remain in your present intractable temper."

"I fancy you're right," Lanyard said carelessly, following as Wertheimer turned up the lights, into a modest salon, cozily furnished. "You live here alone, I understand?"

"Quite—make yourself perfectly at ease; nobody can hear us. And," the Englishman added with a laugh, "do sit down—take that chair there, which commands both doors, if you don't trust me."

"Do you think I ought to?"

"Hardly. Otherwise I'd ask you to take my word that you're safe for the time being. As it is, I shan't be offended if you keep your gun handy and your sense of self-preservation running under forced draft. But you won't refuse to join me in a whisky-and-soda?"

"No," said Lanyard slowly—"not if we drink from the same bottle."

Again the Englishman laughed unaffectedly as turning to a side-table, he fetched a decanter, glasses, bottled soda, a box of cigarettes, and placed them on a stand within Lanyard's reach.

KENOSHA BOWLERS STILL IN LEAD AT TOURNEY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 3.—Failure to stand up in the final frame of the last game cost a Kenosha team the lead in the state bowling tournament here Wednesday night. The American Brass company No. 12 team finished four pins behind the Simmons No. 1 team, present tourney leaders, scoring 2,538.

The brass quintet hung up a trio of 900 counts and had an excellent chance of shooting 1,000 in the third game, but poor work in the last inning robbed them of the leadership. Fred Smith, anchor man, knocked off a spare in the tenth frame when a strike with a good follow up would have boosted his teammates to the top. The bunch shot consistently, 612 being the top total and 524 the lowest.

Sam Anderson, lead off man for this outfit, displaced Bobby Beatz for all event honors, registering 4,504. There were no high counts in the doubles or singles, although two Milwaukee pairs registered better than 1,100.

Fielder Jones, new manager of the Browns, has a puzzling problem on his hands. It is part of his baseball doctrine that a good club needs only half as many southpaw batters as it has right-handers. The left-handers in his possession now are Carl Wellman, Ernie Koob, Earl Hamilton and George Sisler of the Browns, and Eddie Plank and "Doc" Watson of the St. Louis Reds. And Jones says that he will pitch Sisler this year, despite Rickie's plan to play the college in the outfield. At least four of these players are of unquestioned merit, and it now appears that Fielder may have to recant on his hucking doctrine.

MILAN TO TRAIN AT HOT SPRINGS

Clyde Milan.

While the large majority of Clark Griffith's Washington Nationals will train at Charlottesville, Va., this spring, Clyde Milan will be obliged to go to Hot Springs to get into condition. Walter Johnson will go with Milan to the springs to keep Milan company.

RULES DRAWN UP FOR BASKETBALL TOURNEY AT "Y"

First Games in Basket Ball Tourney at "Y" Will Be Played on Saturday Morning.

Plans for the first annual graded school basketball league at the Young Men's Christian Association have been completed and the opening games will be played on Saturday morning, February 5th. All the teachers of the schools in the city have co-operated with the committee in charge, and a great success in the tournament is insured. At a meeting of the captains and the committee last night a set of rules were drawn up as follows:

Each school to have captains who shall have entire charge of his players at each game and who shall be responsible for getting the men in readiness to start play on time.

Each Saturday games will be called according to schedule at 10:45 a. m. sharp.

In case of inability of captain being present at game and performing duties shall designate one of the players to be acting captain for that particular time and game and who shall have full power as captain.

Teams not ready to play by 10:45 a. m. on Saturday scheduled, shall forfeit game to opponent.

In case both teams fail to appear and not ready to play at time and day scheduled, game will be cancelled for that day.

Substitutes may be placed into the game at any time by the captain (or one designated as acting captain), but as men are withdrawn from the game they cannot be replaced.

No players shall be used unless his name is handed in either to Mr. Leak or Mr. Center by 9:30 a. m. on the date of scheduled game. Absolutely no names accepted after 9:30 a. m.

Twelve minute halves will be played throughout the entire league.

All players shall be regular attendants upon the school they represent and recorded in the school records as a student of that school.

Team winning the largest number of games, by process of elimination, will receive the trophy, which will be suitably engraved.

Players who participate in over half of the games played by the winning team, will have their names placed upon the trophy. The list cannot exceed six names.

Trophy awarded will be permanent with new trophy contested for each year.

Trophy will be presented the winning school as soon as possible after the close of the league.

All questions arising and presented by any school regarding the conduct of the league, qualification of the players, or any other matters, will be finally settled by the committee in charge, consisting of:

Mr. H. C. Buell,
Mr. Harry Dutcher,
Mr. C. E. Leak,
Mr. H. J. Center.

In the presence of the captains of the school teams concerned.

Following is the schedule arranged up until March 1st.

Feb. 5—Washington vs. Adams.
Jefferson vs. Garfield.
Feb. 12—St. Patrick vs. Lincoln.
Jackson vs. Grant.

St. Mary's team will probably have a game arranged on this date.

NOW JACK DILLON IS SIGNED WITH WILLARD FOR NEW YORK BATTLE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
New York, Feb. 3.—Jack Dillon of Indianapolis will battle Champion Jess Willard for the world's heavyweight title in New York between April 10 and 22.

Curley and Harry Pollock, the promoters, announced Wednesday afternoon that the match had been clinched.

Dillon, they said, will receive $10,000 guarantee and Willard $32,000. The Indianapolis man was offered the bout when the promoters agreed to come to terms with Frank Moran.

LAKOTAS MAY ENTER TITLE TOURNAMENT

Illinois Athletic Club to Hold Central Association Tourney in Chicago Starting the 22nd.

Backers of the Lakota Cardinal basketball team of this city are considering entering the team in the unlimited weight basketball championship tournament of the Central Amateur Athletic Union, which will be held in Chicago from February 22nd to the 24th. The games of the tournament are to be played in the I. A. C. new gymnasium, and the championship award is not for a pecuniary purpose but for the good of the sport, and the I. A. C. are soliciting entries from out of town teams to make the tourney representative of the Central association district.

Seven sets of gold, silver and bronze championship medals will be awarded and a trophy emblematic of this title will be given the winning team. At the date of the tourney the majority of the Lakota players will be home from the colleges and it is almost certain, judging from present statements, that they will compete for the association title.

If the Lakotas do not enter this tourney they will make a tour of the northern part of the state, meeting the best five in this section.

The Peoria Tigers, whom the Lakotas play Saturday night, were defeated by a few points in their game with Rockford Company K last night at Rockford, but the outcome is not indicative that they are a weak team. Even the Oswego five were beaten at Rockford. Press accounts show them to be a great team and capable of giving the Lakotas a merry battle.

MORRIS MILLER

Jack Johnson, discussing his fight with Frank Moran, said recently: "I never saw a man who could stand up under punishment the way Moran did. I hit him harder and oftener than I ever hit any other man, but I couldn't put him down. I wore myself out hitting him."

According to figures compiled by Captain T. L. Huston, the New York Yankees have spent $120,000 for new

Some surprise is expressed that the Chicago Cubs succeeded in waiving Art Phelan out of the majors. By many he was considered a pretty good looking ball player. He should make Kansas City a valuable man.

Bill Abstein is still valuable enough for clubs to quarrel over his services. Both Wichita in the west and Oakland in the Coast league are claiming him as having accepted terms.

"I think," said the magnate, "that we will have a great team. We expect to have $25,000 playing third for us, while $6,000 will be behind the bat. I am expecting some great twirling from $5,000, but if he should be batted from the mound we could send in $4,350, our noted left-hander. While we do not expect so much from $3,250, I still consider that he is a promising youngster and with a little seasoning will be a second Walter Johnson. Of course, in the outfield we have $12,400 and $8,500, who are both fast and who can hit.

Altogether we intend to have a very superior team, which should finish close to the top in all financial reports and not worse than sixth in its league."

In the National Museum at Washington hangs a rifle that once belonged to Davy Crockett. Will they one day hang beside it a bat once the property of Benny Kauff?

One rule laid down by the present boxing commission needs a bit of amplification and a strengthening. That's the one that reads that a boxer disqualified for stalling, fouling or for any other cause, forfeits his share of the purse. There's no reason at all why this money that would have gone to the fighter should be retained by the promoting club. It should be turned over to charity, or better still, if a main bout performer is disqualified, ticket holders should be entitled to a refund, say one-third or one-fourth. The rule as it now reads offers opportunity for the knockers to get busy if it so happens that there is a small attendance when a fighter is disqualified. They'll be saying the referee's act was impeded by a desire to save money for the club.

According to figures compiled by Captain T. L. Huston, the New York Yankees have spent $120,000 for new players since last summer, when the club's scouts began to hustle around trying to find talent. Here is a list of the purchases and prices paid:

Lee Magee	$12,500
Pitcher Cullop	12,000
Infielder Gedeon	6,000
Pitcher Tipple	5,500
Outfielder Gilheoley	3,500
Pitcher Morrice	6,000
Pitcher Russell	6,000
Catcher Alexander	6,000
Outfielder Hendryx	5,000
Outfielder Miller	5,000
Pitcher Markie	3,000

Other deals bring the amount up to $120,000. No other club in either major league has expanded as much in an effort to build up a winner, and the chances are that Bill Donovan will have a much better team next season than he had in 1915.

Joe Jackson of the Detroit News pays the following tribute to manager Griffith anent the Gedeon case: "With interest we will watch the course of Clark Griffith in the case of Joe Gedeon, whose release was sold by Sinclair to the New York Yankees, and whom Griffith says Washington will insist on having. If it is true that the player took advance money for 1916 from Griffith it is impossible that his Federal contract, under baseball or any other law, should be binding. He never played with Newark, so that the clause that says that all players shall belong to the Fed clubs with which they were last season does not hold. Griffith is a fighter, and will go the route. He raises an interesting point, and one the settlement of which will be worth watching."

Billy Smith, former manager of the Atlanta team, has been appointed manager of the Richmond International league team, which a few days ago passed into the hands of Richmond folk. Smith is on his way to Richmond to see what is needed in the way of material.

The fact that Hal Chase is not to be allowed to play in the American league, should increase Griffith's chances for getting some sort of a good trade for Chic Gandil. Fielder Jones was negotiating for Chase, and he also was mentioned as going to one or two other clubs in the American league which are in need of first basemen. The barring of the former White Sox player should increase the demand for Gandil and result in a ball player of more than ordinary ability being obtained in his stead.

It is not yet definitely decided whether Jim Callahan will take the Pirates to Hot Springs, Ark., or to Columbus, Ga., to do the spring training. Cal figures that the springers have had enough of Hot Springs, and that they would fare better down at Columbus, Ga., where there is a regular big league ball field and perfect hotel accommodations are available. President Dreyfuss is not taking any sides in the matter. He will be satisfied with whatever selection his manager may make.

Manager Donovan of the Yankees expects to have his infield made up of Pipp at first, Gedeon at second, Peckinpaugh at short and Maisei at third. He proposes to play Lee Magee in the outfield, where his hitting and speed will prove to good advantage.

The Browns are going to abolish their scouting department. Considering the fact that Fielder Jones has some sixty players on hand, he has no room for scouts, but he might employ a couple of first class salesmen.

If there is enough in that piece it is just as good and worth as much to a woman as though she selected it and had it cut from the full bolt. She buys it much less than regular. It's a bargain. MELLOW-SWEET IS TASTE OF "SPEAR HEAD"

Most Richly-Flavored Chew That Was Ever Pressed Into Plugs

FAVORITE FOR A GENERATION

Red-blooded men with real tobacco hunger find that they can satisfy it only by chewing, and the most wholesome and satisfying tobacco to chew is that made in plug form.

The limit of luxury in tobacco chewing is the rich, sweet, juicy flavor that trickles through your system when you chew Spear Head.

No other chewing tobacco is so mellow, so luscious and so satisfying. No other equals Spear Head for putting a keen edge on your appetite.

Spear Head is made of the world's best tobacco leaf—the choicest of red Kentucky Burley. This leaf is selected for its full, juicy richness with the most painstaking care, is stemmed by hand, is pressed into Spear Head plugs so slowly that not a drop of the rich, natural juice escapes.

Your first chew of Spear Head will open your eyes to the genuine enjoyment there is in chewing.

Chew the rich and mellow tobacco that has been the favorite for a third of a century—that's Spear Head. Try it for 10c cut.

FORTY YEARS AGO

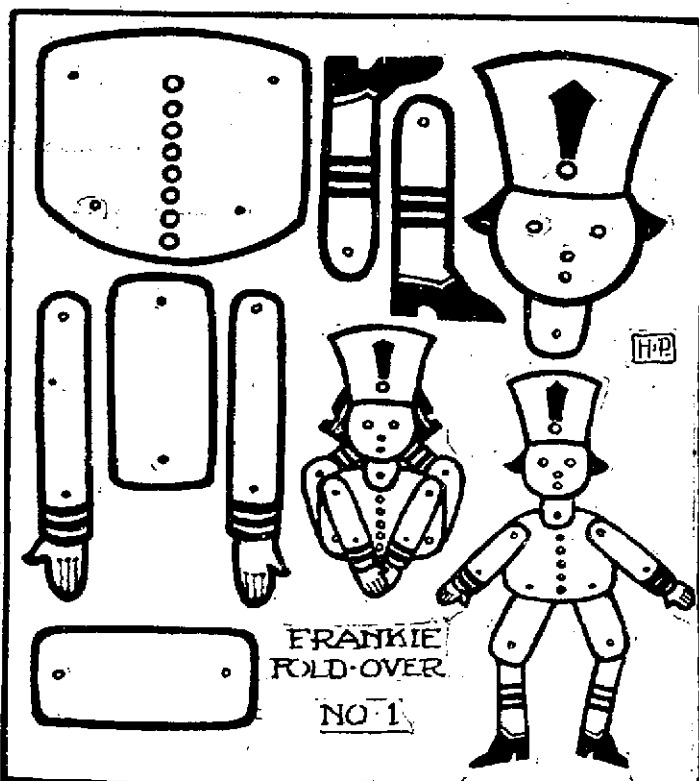

Forty Years ago... The Janesville Daily Gazette, Feb. 3, 1876. The work on the cotton factory addition will be commenced immediately. Milder today, but wintry enough. The weather prophets say that February will be a cold month. Burr Robbins is busily engaged in reorganizing his show for the coming season. He will have a much larger show than last year, and will travel by rail. Mr. Robbins will not be out of the city by the end of the month.

Something To Cut And Paste

The Foldover Family—No. 1

This is Frankie Foldover. Paste this drawing on a light-weight cardboard and when dry color the different parts of Frankie with your crayons or water-color paints. You will find this easier to cut out if you copy this drawing very much larger on another piece of white paper before pasting. Next cut out the parts and put them together, at the little round holes with paper fasteners (which father or big brother can bring to you from the office). If you cannot get these fasteners use pins by bending them over at the back. Frankie is the first of the little people in the Foldover family, and we hope you are going to enjoy

RUSSIANS FIND FAULT ON HOW AMERICANS AID WAR PRISONERS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Peking, Feb. 3.—Russian officials and the representatives of other entente powers in Harbin have found much fault with the way the United States has administered war relief to German prisoners in the port of Manchuria.

Complaints have been made that Charles K. Moser, the American consul at Harbin, has rendered assistance to German prisoners who have escaped from Russian prison camps. The American position in administering relief to Germans and Austrians in Harbin is that Harbin is Chinese territory, and consequently United States officials, as neutrals, are under obligations to administer to the wants of all Germans and Austrians who are in need, regardless of what part they have taken in the war.

Mr. Moser recently paid a visit to Peking and discussed the relief work at Harbin with Dr. Reinsch, the American minister, and Chinese officials. The Chinese have never taken a firm position in their resistance of the capture of Germans and Austrians who escape from Siberia close to Harbin, and it is not likely that they will do so. German prisoners who have escaped into Mongolia and Manchuria have frequently been recaptured on Chinese soil by Russian soldiers and taken back into Russian territory. Escaped prisoners have been seized at Mukden and taken from railway trains.

The German and Austrian legations in Peking have protested against China's failure to protect the subjects of these two countries on neutral soil, but without results. Ever since the opening of Harbin to foreign trade it has been much disputed by the Russians. At first they insisted that the treaty port was located on the river a number of miles from the present city. This position was not concurred in by the United States and other powers. When the United States consulate was first opened at Harbin, some ten years ago, representatives of the United States suffered many indignities and efforts were made to discourage the development of Harbin as a treaty port. Russia, however, maintains a consul at Harbin and by so doing has justified in a measure the action of other powers.

A constant effort has been made by Russia to discourage the idea that the present city of Harbin is Chinese territory. Being such an important center on the Trans-Siberian railway the Russians have always endeavored to maintain as strong a hold as possible upon the city. Without actually declaring their ownership, they have endeavored to create the impression that Harbin is Russian territory. Until the opening of the present war they were strenuously opposed in this position by other European powers. However, with the entrance of the entente into the struggle against Germany and her allies, Great Britain and France have changed their attitude somewhat because of the questions directly connected with the war which have arisen in China. Neutrals who desire to continue in trade in Manchuria and Mongolia, and who have no part in the disputes arising over the war problems, have shown no disposition to acquiesce in the Russian position.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS FIGHT RAISE IN RATES FOR CARRYING PAPERS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Washington, Feb. 3.—Newspaper publishers of the country, fighting proposed increases on news print paper, soon will know the result of their fight. The interstate commerce commission has before it the facts, following hearings and arguments.

If the rates are granted, publishers east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio river will be particularly affected. Publishers all over the country who rely on paper from the east will be somewhat affected. All classes of paper are included in the proposed increases. The situation as applied to news print paper is:

The rates named rates on which they say will equalize rates on all classes of paper. At present the rates are admittedly confused. It is claimed that the new rates asked will result in increased revenues for the railroads, and that all rates will be equalized.

Since 1898 the New England and northern New York mills, which make 75 per cent of the news print, have gotten a commodity rate of 18 1/2 cents 100 pounds. Before the 5 per cent increase, this rate was 18 cents. The proposed commodity rate, as it is called, is for 21 cents an advance of 11 per cent. It applies to news print particularly from the territory named and from Quebec.

The publishers claim that nearly all points will be affected—all combination rates to the south, southeast and west that base on Cincinnati, Louisville and other points in Central and Eastern territory (west of the line through Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Pittsburgh and Wheeling, to the Mississippi river). This means that practically every publisher who gets his paper (as does almost all of them) from the east will be affected. The publishers say they will have to bear the increase and that they can't afford to let the rates go.

News print paper comprises 29.4 per cent of all the paper produced. Southern, central and western states consume far more than they produce. There is practically no movement from west to east, so that the rates affecting the east will affect the west as well.

JUSTICE MARSHALL TAKES A VACATION

Takes First Real Layoff of His Twenty Years on State Supreme Bench.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Madison, Wis., Feb. 3.—After serving on the bench for twenty years, Justice R. D. Marshall decided yesterday that he would take a few days' vacation. Of course he has been allowed his summer vacation, as the other judges, but he has usually had so much to do that he never takes it. When he did not take a vacation, the old employees about the supreme court room smiled, but doubted. When he left yesterday he said he might be gone six weeks, but the wise ones say that he could not stay away from work longer than ten days. Justice Marshall went south, destination not disclosed.

NOW FEELS ENTIRELY WELL

Those who have backache, rheumatism, stiff and swollen joints or other symptoms of kidney trouble will be interested in a statement from A. H. Francis, Zenith, Kas., who writes: "I had a severe pain in my back and could hardly move. I tried several remedies with no results. I took about two-thirds of a 50c box of Poley Kidney Pills and now feel entirely well." Middle-aged and older men and women whose kidneys are weakened find these safe pills give relief from sleep-disturbing bladder ailments.—W. T. Sherer.

OVER FIVE HUNDRED ATTEND ROAD SCHOOL

Attendance is Two Hundred More Than Last Year, Testifying to Popularity of Session.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Madison, Wis., Feb. 3.—The good roads school now in session here has an attendance of 200 more than attended last year. At the close of last night's session 511 had enrolled, and there were letters from good roads builders in the state indicating that at least 100 additional would be here for the closing days of the session. Last year the attendance was about 300. With three exceptions every county highway commissioner is in attendance.

There are more people in attendance at the Wisconsin roads school this week than have been in attendance at the good roads schools of all of the middle western states combined, said A. R. Hirst, state highway engineer, last night. Much of the program is of a technical nature involving a discussion of engineering problems of the cost of road construction, surfacing and bridge construction.

PLAN TO DEVELOP RICH ALASKA COAL FIELDS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Washington, Feb. 2.—Actual development of the fabulously rich Matanuska coal fields in Alaska will begin this year. The small independent miner will have a chance, under the lease system Secretary of the Interior Lane is expected to announce within the next few weeks, to work this coal field. Uncle Sam has so carefully guarded from being gobbled my the coal barons. This is the prediction from Secretary of the Interior Lane.

By fall he plans to have the government railroad built to the coal fields. An army of railroad builders will begin about March 1 to complete the line to the Matanuska fields. "Our immediate objective for the Matanuska fields," said Secretary Lane today, "We want to push the railroad through so that we will be in the coal fields by the end of this year. We have drawn a lease on these coal lands. We hope within thirty days to be able to announce those parts of the coal fields that are reserved to the government. At the end of this year we hope to have a line from Anchorage up to the Matanuska fields, and we ought to press from the Matanuska river through the Susitna valley to the end of this year. The immediate work this spring and summer on the Alaska railroad, according to Lane and Chairman Eides of the Alaska Railroad Commission, will be to complete the road from the deep water terminal at Seward through to Matanuska. "We plan to build this summer as much as possible of the road from Kern Creek to Anchorage," said Chairman Eides. The final payment for the Alaska Northern railroad, bought by the government will be made July 5, according to Chairman Eides. The whole purchase price was $1,150,000 and the Alaska Northern has already been paid, and twenty more miles graded. That the Alaska Northern can be put into shape for $400,000 is asserted by Secretary Lane. He insists the government got a bargain in acquiring it, as it cost $2,750,000. Seventy pound rails are being laid on the new government road and new track of fifteen miles from the end of the Alaska Northern has already been laid, and twenty more miles graded.

NEW YORK CURB GROWS TO SECOND STOCK MARKET

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
New York, Feb. 2.—Spectators stopping today on lower Broadway looked at the second largest stock market in the world—the New York Curb, bigger than the London Stock Exchange or the Paris Bourse, or the stock market of any other city. Stock Exchange itself, the Curb business is now nearly two million shares a week. Before the war the London and Paris exchanges did a much larger volume of trading than the Curb, but the war and the industrial boom sweeping this country has pushed both of the important foreign exchanges backward. Minimum prices are still in force on the London Exchange and the Paris Bourse is still under war restrictions, which limits the extent of their trading. Transactions on the Curb practically every week are over 2,000,000 as compared with a business of 3,000,000 shares or more on the New York Stock Exchange. Boston and Philadelphia stock markets transact a business of less than two hundred thousand shares weekly, while the markets at Pittsburgh, Chicago and Baltimore are well below fifty thousand a week.
